So hey! I just wanted to say I'm so greatful for all the support you guys have given me. And if I came across annoying and pressing I'm sorry. I just have lost so many people in my life that when I find someone who will listen to me and not make fun of me like people at school do, I get attached. So I'm backing off. But I just want to say I'm so greatful for all of you and I'm sorry if I was getting annoying.

Please Phil

You weren't getting annoying, it was different. For the most part, the WoFMB is kids that aren't much older than you. We're about as equipped to handle the issues that you struggle with as you are. I know it was certainly frustrating for me when I realized I couldn't help you and that bad things kept on (and seem to keep on) happening to you. It's perfectly fine to vent here, but when it becomes all you talk about is when it becomes disheartening-- the impression it gives is that you focus on the bad things. However, you should never feel like you're being a burden on other people; there are plenty of listening ears to be had here, but sometimes those listening ears need a break. If you aren't already, I'd recommend journaling and writing your thoughts down. Even if you can't find a solution, it never hurts to process your thinking and put it in order. I also strongly advise you find a physical outside support system as well. Talk to a guidance counselor, a teacher, a friend, a neighbor whatever. They will have more context and ability to help you out than we ever will. We're still here for support, but we should not be the only people you turn to.

That being said, thank you for apologizing and recognizing what you did. It says a lot about you. I sincerely hope things turn to the better for you soon.

When it's time for you to venture out, don't let fear have you looking back at what you're leaving behind.

Ishamel would be correct. Keep in mind we are a community and we need to be there for each other, if you need someone to talk to there is always someone to listen.
